No place had been found to the scorpion at the night. Scorpion stung to poet mother's toe. And go hide at the beneath of sack of the rice.

The peasant's neighbours came like birds to see his mother. All came priest etc. They came and started to pray to her.

The poet father was a sceptic and rationalist who is trying all the rituals to save his wife. He tried all herbs and hybrids, medicines and the powders and a little bit of paraffin to her toe and praying to let tame his pain. And the priest tries all the rituals and prayers to save the poet's mother.

All saying that maybe the scorpion is in house only so the poison not going so they started to find him night by holding torches, lanterns but they didn't find the scorpion. All believe in the ancient thought all started to pray and console to her by saying may in next you will get less pain in next birth. May all your sins of past get reduced. Hope you will get reduced the pain of sting.

After 20 hours of pain poisonous started to get slow and releasing from her body. She started to get well. And when she got up first she said that thanks of god that he choose me to sting by scorpion not my children.

In this poem shows the unconditional love of mother towards his children, and the care and love of husband towards his wife and the relation between the neighbours towards their neighbours family and the helping nature of the rural families.
